

Abstract

The present invention provides a method of minimizing absorption of visible light in an ink composition comprising an IR-absorbing metal-dithiolene dye, comprising preselecting said dye such that it includes at least 5 one moiety for reducing intermolecular interactions between adjacent dye molecules.

The method is especially suitable for use in connection with netpage and Hyperlabel systems.